

The World to hold 11-day “Grüezi from Switzerland” food festival this November

If you asked anyone to name the most beautiful country on Earth, Switzerland would probably be the most common answer. However, ask those same people what their favorite Swiss food is, and you might be left with quite a few blank stares...

While Swiss food may not be the most famous cuisine in the world, the country is in fact home to a melting pot of flavors and eating styles thanks to a unique blend of German, Italian and French culinary influences.

And now, you can discover a true taste of Switzerland in Bangkok, as The World restaurant at Centara Grand at CentralWorld holds an 11-day Switzerland food festival from 15-25 November 2018!

Alongside The World's normal buffet lineup, you can say 'Grüezi' to plenty of savory and sweet Swiss dishes served fresh from dedicated 'Roesti' and 'Raclette' stations. Of course, no Swiss food festival is complete without endless helpings of premium cheese and fondue, with varieties such as Gruyere, Appenzell Extra and Tisliter.

An extravagant dessert selection, as well as soup, fish and meat carving stations complete this one-off culinary experience.

The all-you-can-eat buffet is priced at THB 850++ for lunch (food only) and THB 1,690++ for dinner (all food and drinks package). The World is also holding two special Swiss Sunday Brunches on 18 and 25 November priced at THB 1,890++ (all food and drinks package).
